DUTCH COUNTER NEEDED

Allies To Put All Forces Into Defense Of Last Important City

BANDUNG, March 7—Battle for possession of Java approached its climax today as the zero hour for a decisive Japanese assault on Bandung drew near.

Already the enemy was knocking at the defenses of Bandung, provisional capital and military headquarters of the Netherlands East Indies, and Dutch defenders were rushing preparations for a last stand.

Outnumbered five to one on the ground and lacking planes, tanks and mortars, the Dutch continued to retreat amid indications that Gen. Hein Ter Poorten, the N. E. I. commander, was experiencing difficulty in extricating and reorganizing his troops.

The Dutch leader was attempting to reform his lines for a counter-attack which observers felt must be launched immediately if the swift Japanese onslaught can be checked.

Without such a counter-attack, it was conceded, Java's situation is fraught with grave danger.

Everywhere in Bandung preparations for the "worst" were being rushed.

Records Destroyed
Government offices and business houses were burning their papers.

At all corners of the city there was evidence that Bandung is a front-line community under siege. The rumble of artillery could be heard plainly even above the traffic noise in the center of the town.

All last night was passed under a continuous air raid alert and conditions of total blackout.

CALIFORNIA SHOWS THAT WATER SUPPLY CAN BE DESTROYED WITH EASE

MONROVIA, Cal., March 7—

City council today was reconsidering Councilman Jim Doyle's motion that steps be taken to protect Monrovia's water supply line.

Doyle's original suggestions were turned down, so the councilman took matters in his own hands. He toured 11 miles of the water system in two hours, planted enough mock explosives to blow up the works and leave the city without water for an extended time.

He then returned to the council with the "undeniable facts and figures."

SEVEN AIRMEN LOST IN RIVER

Twin-Engined Army Plane Falls In South; Victims From Patterson Field

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., March 7—Although no bodies have been recovered, hope was abandoned today for seven men who were aboard a twin-engined Army transport plane when it crashed near Stuart, Fla.

The transport was caught in a severe squall, which apparently wrenched a wing off of it, and it fell in flames into the St. Lucie river inlet near Stuart early Thursday, according to eyewitnesses. The tragedy was revealed by officials at Morrison field last night.

The missing airmen, whose bodies are being sought in the river, were from Patterson field, Dayton, O., and from the air depot at Middletown, Pa., at Patterson field, they were identified as:

Lieut. John R. Evans, of Auburndale, Mass., the pilot.
Lieut. Harry E. Bullock Jr., of Lexington, Ky., co-pilot.
Sergeant Erceel Stallard, of Lathair, Ky., aviation engineer.
Corp. Clarence F. Ayers, of Huntington, W. Va., radio operator.
Lieut. Raymond D. Clements, Lieut. H. Simpson, and Sergeant John A. Rutko, all from the air depot at Middletown, whose home addresses were not available at Dayton.

NEWBORN, N. C., March 7—Search was under way today for an army coastal patrol plane believed to have crashed east of Vanceboro. An explosion heard in that vicinity, together with the fact that the plane was overdue, led to the belief it had crashed, military authorities said.

Other details were withheld.

RUBBER DEALER RAPS SHORTAGE CLAIMS OF U. S.

WASHINGTON, March 7—Challenging Price Administrator Leon Henderson's statements concerning the rubber shortage, Elliot E. Simpson, New York independent rubber dealer, today asserted there is enough scrap rubber available in the United States to take care of the nation's civilian needs for the duration of the war.

Simpson, a director of the Dressage Rubber company, of N. Y., one of the largest independent rubber firms in the country, has turned over an 18-page document on available rubber supplies to the Senate committee investigating national defense.

"I was astounded at Leon Henderson's statement concerning the rubber shortage situation," Simpson said. "There is absolutely no need for the government to consider the requisitioning of tires from private civilian cars in order to meet defense needs."

MAJOR TEST AT HAND FOR CITY PARKING METERS

Police officials were looking forward to late Saturday afternoon and evening for a first real test of the parking meter program, which was placed in effect last Thursday.

Meters will operate until 10 p. m. Saturday instead of 6 p. m. as is the schedule on other week-nights. Officials are hoping that the meters will prevent the usual Saturday night traffic congestion on Court and Main streets.

On Thursday, the first day for the meter program, police issued more than 50 "courtesy tickets" to persons who parked overtime in the meter zones. Most of the tickets went to persons who said they did not know the meters were operating. Fewer tickets were issued on Friday.

Patrolman Alva Shasteen said that he was issuing regular penalty tickets Saturday and was taking the license number of each car parked overtime, but Mayor Ben H. Gordon said he would be reasonable with overtime parkers until motorists become accustomed to the meters.

BIG TANK UNIT HITS JAP DRIVE

Powerful British Force In Heavy Fighting North Of Rangoon

MANDALAY, March 7—Powerful British tank units today smashed into the midst of Japanese infantry forces northeast of Pegu, in the region where heavy fighting has been raging some 50 miles north of threatened Rangoon.

It appeared that the tanks had arrived just in time to assist the hard-pressed British imperial forces who had been forced back from the Sittang river defense line to a point within 15 miles of Pegu.

Latest reports said the Japs on this front have no tanks and thus have been placed in a serious position. Authorities said it was hardly likely the Japanese will be able to bring armored reinforcements across the difficult country between Burma and Thailand.

Arrival of the tanks at the front hailed with utmost enthusiasm.

For a reason which has completely mystified all English-speaking persons in Mandalay, native Burmese near the battle front kept yelling:

"The Christmas tree has arrived."

The Japanese, who were short of anti-tank guns, brought heavy mortars into action against the British tanks.

Arrival of the powerful British force in the fighting zone may have important results on the future course of the Burmese campaign.

FIRE LEVELS SLAUGHTER HOUSE IN WILLIAMSPORT

Building Of Basic Magnesium Company In Nevada Lost With Huge Damage

MANY DRAWINGS BURN

Contractor Claims There Is No Question About How Flames Started

LAS VEGAS, Nev., March 7—Fire which swept through the administration building of Basic Magnesium, Inc., last night, burning it to the ground, was bluntly attributed to sabotage today.

L. G. McNeil, president of the McNeil Construction company, the concern which is building the nation's largest magnesium plant for Basic, asserted that there was no question but that the fire was deliberately set.

He said that the fire was started outside the building at a point where a strong northwest wind would sweep the flames through the wooden structure.

The building blazed fiercely for two hours and, although all Las Vegas fire-fighting equipment was rushed 11 miles to the scene, it was a complete loss.

It has an "H" shaped wooden structure, with one wing occupied by the office staff of the Basic company and the other wing occupied by the administrative and engineering staff of the McNeil Construction company.

Hundreds of sets of drawings and thousands of dollars worth of office equipment were lost in the fire. However, it was said that the construction company has duplicate sets of the destroyed drawings.

The production units of the plant, still under construction, were some distance away and were not endangered by the blaze.

The first unit of the plant is scheduled to start production late in April or early May. When all units have been completed it will be the nation's largest magnesium producer.

THIRD MAN HELD ON CHARGES OF ARMED ROBBERY

Sheriff's officers believed Saturday they had solved completely the Gold Cliff Chateau robbery of April 9, 1937, with the arrest of a third man, Albert Ogan, 57, Dayton, late Friday.

Ogan was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Bryan Custer who went to Dayton Friday after him. At the time of the arrest the Dayton man refused to comment on the Gold Cliff robbery, but at county jail Friday night confessed that he, along with his brother, Arthur, of Springfield and Elmer Brown of Chillicothe, were the three implicated in the stick-up.

Brown and Arthur Ogan confessed their part in the robbery after they were arrested Tuesday and committed to county jail.

The confession of Albert Ogan accounts for the second man who entered the Gold Cliff filling station with Brown, slugged the operator, Beryl Greenlee, over the head with a beer bottle, and escaped with $100 in cash and about $50 in checks. Arthur Ogan remained in the car, which was parked a short distance down the road.

Greenlee, who now lives in Indianapolis, Indiana, is expected to arrive in Circleville sometime Saturday to file armed robbery charges against the three men.

LONDON, March 7—A dramatic description of a huge convoy bearing American fighting men and war materials to "help in the battle of the southwest Pacific" was published by the London Daily Mail today.

Java's zero hour drew near today as all indications pointed to an early decision in the last bastion of the Dutch East Indies.

At the same time fierce fighting raged on the Russian and Burma fronts, while an apparent case of sabotage marred the home front in the United States.

Fire swept through the administration building of Basic Magnesium, Inc., at Las Vegas, Nevada, burning the structure to the ground. L. G. McNeil, president of the construction company which is building the nation's largest magnesium plant for Basic, bluntly attributed the blaze to sabotage.

While United Nations forces struggled against the Japanese invaders of Java, belief prevailed in Washington that new offensive blows will be struck momentarily against the axis powers.

But for the moment, Java, an erstwhile Pacific paradise and tourist mecca, held the attention of the world.

There the Japs already were knocking at the defenses of the provisional N.E.I. capital, Bandung, which now is a city virtually on the front lines.

Dutch forces were continuing to retreat before the overwhelming numerical superiority of the Japanese, while the N.E.I. commander, Gen. Hein Ter Poorten, struggled

McClain Chalks Up Victory In Initial Contest

Greenfield Crew Tops Wellston, 66-19; Blue Lions Drubbed; Gibsonville Gains Single Point Advantage

Greenfield, unbeaten champion of the South Central Ohio league, started its quest for district honors in splendid fashion Friday evening by running up a 66-19 score on a hapless Wellston team. The game was played at Athens.

McClain's next foe, however, will be the strong Athens high team which came through with a 36-34 victory over Ironton in another Southeastern district event.

SAMMY ANGOTT GAINS VERDICT

Bob Montgomery Unable To Halt Challenger; Fight With Robinson Asked

NEW YORK, March 7—A very happy and contented Sammy Angott, rejoicing in a unanimous twelve-round verdict over Philadelphia Bob Montgomery, looked forward today to a possible return match with Sugar Ray Robinson and also a defense of the world's lightweight championship against Allie Stolz here in May.

Angott, who gave the 12-5 favorite a severe body drubbing to win going away, last evening, said he wanted another crack at Robinson, the sensational unbeaten welterweight who holds a decision win over him.

"If I can't get Ray," (and he won't) said Samuel, "I probably will fight Stolz for my title here in May." There are four dates in May, the 6th, 13th, 20th and 27th on Promoter Mike Jacobs' schedule with the 13th the probable choice for the bout if it is arranged.

Angott was much the best in scoring his second win over Montgomery. The latter, though heavily favored because of recent victories, made no fight of it at all. He had strength and the punch but made use of neither. When it was over the INS score card gave Sammy nine rounds, Bob two, with one even.

Sammy, who weighed 139 to Montgomery's 135 1-4, took all the play away from Robert by leading repeatedly and beating him to the punch with jolts to the body and head. Angott won the first three rounds, ran into a hard Montgomery right which staggered him, to lose the fourth, then came on to win the fifth and sixth.

Bob managed to land some hard head smashes to win the seventh but the eighth was a dull affair and was called even. From there on Sammy did almost all the forcing, tied Montgomery up and won all the remaining rounds. He floored Bob for no count with a hard right in the ninth and had opened a cut on Monty's left ear by the time the final bell sounded.

Arthur Donovan refereed, and Jimmy Reilly and George Lecron acted as judges. The paid attendance was 11,522 and the gross gate $24,284.

NATIONAL CAGE TOURNAMENT UNDER WAY IN CHICAGO

Besides the Detroit-Toledo affair, the Zollner Pistons team from Fort Wayne, Ind., surprise team of the National Basketball league, will clash with the Ordinance team from Aberdeen, Md., and the Harlem Globe Trotters will play the Conoco Oilers of Hagerstown, Md.

BUCKEYE STAR SETS NEW MARK

Bob Wright Runs Hurdles In 7.8 Seconds; Iowa Ace Also Winner

CHICAGO, March 7—With two records already racked up, as a result of preliminary trials last night, Big Ten track field athletes today were primed for finals to-night in the annual Western Conference indoor championships.

On the basis of preliminary qualifiers, a new champion appeared assured. Indiana, the defending title holder, qualified but six men, while Illinois slid twelve under the wire, and Michigan and Ohio State qualified ten and nine respectively.

Iowa, Wisconsin and Purdue each qualified four men. Chicago had one man in competition, and Minnesota and Northwestern were not represented.

The records were set by Bob Wright, Ohio State's great hurdler, and Lee Farmer, Iowa sophomore broad jumper. Wright ran the 70-yard low hurdle flight in 7.8 seconds to better the record set by Olsen of Illinois last year. Farmer jumped 23 feet 2 3/4 inches to add better than seven inches to the former record set by Burnett of Indiana.

Farmer of Iowa also won his heat in the 60 yard dash with a time of 6.3, equalled by Thomas of Michigan in the second heat. Wright and Hammond, both of Ohio State, also won their heats in the dash, but with the slower time of 6.4 seconds.

CROWLEY'S JOB AT FORDHAM U. COMES TO END

By Jack Mahon

NEW YORK, March 7—The nine year coaching career of James Harold (Sleepy) Jim Crowley is ended at Fordham University and, as a quartet of well-known football names were banded around by the street corner swarms as to his probable successor, it was learned today an honest, patriotic gesture on the part of the former member of Notre Dame's glorious four horsemen, was the wisest story behind the volcano that has erupted on Rose Hill.

Before going any farther this is the situation to date. Crowley, a few days ago, underwent a physical examination for a job as athletic director, assigned to the U. S. Naval Air Corps. He has not been notified that he has passed same, has not resigned as the Ram football machine, one of the greatest, year in and year out, in the nation; has a contract with a couple of more seasons to run; has not been consulted by the university as to his possible successor and does not wish to leave the campus on which he has built his coaching reputation unless he enters the service.

Despite the above, officials at Fordham reported yesterday Crowley was definitely "out" and that his successor would be a "nationally famous coach."

Though some quarters insisted Sleepy Jim's successor would not be made known for several weeks, another informant said he would be named early next week.

The main stem buzzed like a hornet's convention today as those supposedly in the know gathered at their favorite cocktail clothes and nominated everyone from Seabiscuit to General MacArthur as Crowley's successor.

30,000 TO SEE WIDENER RACE AT HIALEAH PARK

MIAMI, Fla., March 7—An estimated 30,000 fans moved toward Hialeah race track today for the annual running of the $50,000 Widener handicap, richest of the winter turf classics, for which twenty-two thoroughbreds were nominated.

Market Wise, ridden by Jockey Wendell Eads, rated a slight favorite near post time today. Although known as Lou Tofano's ugly duckling of the turf, Market Wise found enough support among the fans to bring the odds down to 2-1.

Market Wise was assigned 125, with top weight of 128 pounds assigned to Charles H. Howard's Moland, coupled with Porter's Cap as the Howard entry and rated in the bookmaker's odds at 5-2. Porter's Cap was assigned 117 pounds.

Attention, coupled with Dit as the Corning and Hanger entry and rated at odds of 2-1, was put down for 125 pounds. Challenged and Pictor, the William L. Brann entry, both were assigned 126 pounds. Odds of 9-2 prevailed for the Brann entry.

The dictionaries published in 1942 will contain such words and phrases as "bank night," "jam session," "glammed," "brain storm," "pantywaist," "wacky" and "zombie" as part of interesting additions to the American language.

ST. PETERSBURG, FLA., MARCH 7

—Despite a morning round of 75 which gave his followers the jitters, Sam Snead of Hot Springs, Va., today was champion of the $5,000 St. Petersburg golf tournament. He got $1,000 of the prize money.

The veteran campaigner looked bad when he posted the 75 yesterday noon, but he settled down to a 2-under par 70 for the final round, giving him a 72-hole card of 286. That was still three strokes better than his closest rival.

Byron Nelson of Toledo, O., Sam Byrd of Ardmore, Pa., and Chick Harbert of Battle Creek, Mich., tied for second place with 289's, each collecting $583.33.

ST. PETERSBURG PURSE

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 7—Despite a morning round of 75 which gave his followers the jitters, Sam Snead of Hot Springs, Va., today was champion of the $5,000 St. Petersburg golf tournament. He got $1,000 of the prize money.

The veteran campaigner looked bad when he posted the 75 yesterday noon, but he settled down to a 2-under par 70 for the final round, giving him a 72-hole card of 286. That was still three strokes better than his closest rival.

Byron Nelson of Toledo, O., Sam Byrd of Ardmore, Pa., and Chick Harbert of Battle Creek, Mich., tied for second place with 289's, each collecting $583.33.

CIRCLEVILLE RIFLEMEN

Why People Drink Beverage Alcohol

Scripture—Genesis 43:34; Psalm 104:14, 15; Proverbs 31:4-7; Eccles. 2:1-3, 10, 11; Isaiah 56:12; I Cor. 10:6, 7.

The Lord causeth the grass to grow for cattle, and herb for the service of man; that he may bring forth food out of the earth.

The Lord maketh the wine "that maketh glad the heart of man, and oil to make his face to shine, and bread which strengtheneth man's heart."

It is not for kings to drink wine; nor for princes strong drink: lest they drink, and forget the law, and pervert the judgment of the afflicted.

King Solomon tried wine and folly, but found all that was vanity and vexation of spirit and there was no profit in it (GOLDEN TEXT—Proverbs 20:1)

Discovering Why People Drink Beverage Alcohol

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for March 8 is Genesis 43:34; Psalm 104:14, 15; Proverbs 31:4-7; Ecclesiastes 2:1-3, 10, 11; Isaiah 56:12; I Cor. 10:6, 7, the Golden Text being Proverbs 20:1, "Wine is a mocker . . . And whosoever erreth thereby is not wise.")

THE FIRST reference in today's lesson is Genesis. Joseph, whose brothers had sold him into slavery, had risen to be the most important man in all Egypt under the Pharaoh. He had interpreted the Pharaoh's dream of the seven prosperous years for Egypt, followed by years of famine, and been given charge of storing the grain during the time of plenty, and of wisely distributing it when famine came.

Famine had come, too, to Israel, and Jacob, Joseph's father, had sent his sons to Egypt to buy grain that they might not perish. Joseph recognized his brothers who had wronged him, but they did not suspect who he was. He asked them questions about his father and younger brother, Benjamin, and told them to go home and bring Benjamin with them, and he held one brother, Simeon, as hostage so that they would surely return with Benjamin.

Joseph Makes Himself Known

Then, when Benjamin had come with his older brothers, Joseph made himself known to them, and invited them to a feast. He gave them food, but to Benjamin he gave five times as much as he gave the others. Perhaps, one commentator suggests, Joseph wanted to see if the brothers still were envious and would be jealous of Benjamin. They evidently were not, had conquered this weakness which had caused them to be so cruel to Joseph, and they ate and "drank and were merry with him."

There was no drinking to excess in this feast which Joseph made for his repentant brothers. They ate and drank and were happy, but self-controlled.

Do we ever think enough and give adequate thanks for the goodness of our Maker? As the psalmist says, "He causeth the grass to grow for the cattle, and herbs for the service of man; that he may bring forth food out of the earth. And wine that maketh glad the heart of man, and oil to make his face to shine, and bread which strengtheneth man's heart."

We talk of "our" crops, our prosperity, etc., when if it were not for the fertility of the soil and the sunshine and showers, all our labors would be in vain. We are fed by God's bounty, even given wine, which "maketh glad the heart of man" if used as it was intended, not in fermented liquors that, when drunk freely, make people mad—as they surely do. We should daily bless the Lord for His goodness to the children of men.

A queen whose name we do not know had a son named Lemuel. To him this unknown queen wrote, "It is not for kings, O Lemuel, it is not for kings to drink wine; nor for princes strong drink: Lest they drink, and forget the law, and pervert the judgment of any of the afflicted."

Strong drink is bad for any man or woman, high or low, but to him who has charge of the affairs of a nation it is fatal. His judgment is distorted. Things that should be important seem trivial to him; and things that really are of little moment seem vital. Especially in these chaotic days, no one who has a position of trust should drink. The world needs calm, considered thought and deeds, not mad ones. Drinking may make men in high places forget the law, and "pervert the judgment of any of the afflicted," as the queen mother wrote.

In the second chapter of Ecclesiastes, King Solomon tells about his search for happiness. He tried merriment, feasting, great works such as building, planting of vineyards, gardens and orchards. He even tried drinking and other follies, but "retained his wisdom," so that he soon found that all these things that he had tried were vanity. Men drink to be gay, to drown their sorrows; they spend the money that should feed their families on intoxicating beverages. And after all, they find it is not real gaiety they have discovered; that their sorrows have not vanished, but are more troubling than ever, and, like King Solomon, they feel that "all is vanity" worth less than nothing.

Our Golden Text sums up all that we could say about the evil of strong drink. King Solomon, noted for his wisdom, found it to be the truth, that "Wine is a mocker . . . and whosoever erreth thereby is not wise."

A Fighting Pig

That briefly describes a 60 pound pig in a bunch of feeders that we are just getting well started. A ration made by mixing 1700 pounds of ground corn and 300 pounds of a commercial protein hog supplement, fed as a thin slop, twice a day, in addition to the same feed in a self feeder, with one percent salt and about two percent oil meal, with water only a few feet away, and a comfortable, well ventilated bed, is giving very good results, with ten of the porkers in this lot, but the eleventh fighter, isn't doing very well. Producing pork economically isn't his line.

I don't know just how to account for this pugnacious pig, disposed to fight most of the time, for he is a high grade Ohio Improved Chester White, one of the very best breeds in the corn belt. I just learned that some reducing iron in the ration will probably help him, and be beneficial to the others, for they all have a tendency to get too fat, and to grow rather slowly. "Just plain dirt is all that pig needs" a very successful farmer pointed out. "He has been too closely confined." I turned him out with the others in the lot and he and his litter mates and a few relatives ate sod and dirt all day, and this morning his disposition is very much improved.

Another very successful man with hogs says that he has found it profitable to spade up some sod, on wet days, when you don't want the hogs out in the fields, and to keep a fresh supply before them all the time. I tried this on another lot of pigs in January, and I believe it helped them; anyway it gave them some motive for exercise and improved their mental attitude, on a damp chilly day, when they wanted to spend most of their time in bed.

Minerals for Hogs

I just heard a radio announcement of a mineral supplement that will save one tenth of the protein supplement and one third of the corn in a ration for fattening hogs. "Hogs fed our mineral supplement required one tenth less protein and one third less corn to put on 100 pounds of weight," was the statement. It sounds too good to be true but it must be true for this big reliable firm would not make the statement; they couldn't afford to do it. This is well worth investigating. If you will send me a stamped envelope or a post card for reply, I will have my secretary send you the name of the firm making this mineral supplement. This is well worth investigating.

In the meantime may I suggest that you see your county agent and write to your experiment station about mineral supplements for hogs, and for their information as to their value and cost and method of feeding them. This is well worth investigating, too.

Managing Fattening Hogs

"Manage your fattening hogs just like you do your very best dairy cows, and you will get along all right with them." This is the advice of a very successful southern Ohio farmer, from whom I recently purchased nine stock hogs that averaged 114 pounds apiece, at about three months of age. I brought them home and bedded a box stall in the barn with baled wheat straw that was as dry as the day it was cut in the field and put a large trough through the center; kept it filled with warm water, just like I do for the cow and shut them up at night, after about four or five hours of exercise, every nice day in the barnlot. "They are certainly going to town," as a friend expressed it.

I might add that this lot of porkers get a balanced ration made of 1700 pounds of a 36 percent commercial protein supplement in a self feeder and two ears of corn apiece a day. The feeder is in the barn, so that they can eat night and day, if they want to do it, and they do.

While this method of handling fattening hogs is new to me and is not used on very many southern Ohio farms, it works and works well. I'll dare you to try it, as we little farm boys used to express it on the home farm, a good many years ago.

Why People Drink Beverage Alcohol ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Genesis 43:34; Psalm 104:14, 15; Proverbs 31:4-7; Eccles. 2:1-3, 10, 11; Isaiah 56:12; I Cor. 10:6, 7.

By Alfred J. Buescher

The Lord causeth the grass to grow for cattle, and herb for the service of man: that he may bring forth food out of the earth.

The Lord maketh the wine "that maketh glad the heart of man, and oil to make his face to shine, and bread which strengtheneth man's heart."

It is not for kings to drink wine; nor for princes strong drink: lest they drink, and forget the law, and pervert the judgment of the afflicted.

King Solomon tried wine and folly, but found all that was vanity and vexation of spirit and there was no profit in it. (GOLDEN TEXT—Proverbs 20:1)

Discovering Why People Drink Beverage Alcohol

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for March 8 is Genesis 43:34; Psalm 104:14, 15; Proverbs 31:4-7; Ecclesiastes 2:1-3, 10, 11; Isaiah 56:12; I Cor. 10:6, 7, the Golden Text being Proverbs 20:1, "Wine is a mocker . . . And whosoever erreth thereby is not wise.")

THE FIRST reference in today's lesson is Genesis. Joseph, whose brothers had sold him into slavery, had risen to be the most important man in all Egypt under the Pharaoh. He had interpreted the Pharaoh's dream of the seven prosperous years for Egypt, followed by years of famine, and been given charge of storing the grain during the time of plenty, and of wisely distributing it when famine came.

Famine had come, too, to Israel, and Jacob, Joseph's father, had sent his sons to Egypt to buy grain that they might not perish. Joseph recognized his brothers who had wronged him, but they did not suspect who he was. He asked them questions about his father and younger brother, Benjamin, and told them to go home and bring Benjamin with them, and he held one brother, Simeon, as hostage so that they would surely return with Benjamin.

Joseph Makes Himself Known
Then, when Benjamin had come with his older brothers, Joseph made himself known to them, and invited them to a feast. He gave them food, but to Benjamin he gave five times as much as he gave the others. Perhaps, one commentator suggests, Joseph wanted to see if the brothers still were envious and would be jealous of Benjamin. They evidently were not, had conquered this weakness which had caused them to be so cruel to Joseph, and they ate and drank and were merry with him.

There was no drinking to excess in this feast which Joseph made for his repentant brothers. They ate and drank and were happy, but, self-controlled.
Do we ever think enough and give adequate thanks for the goodness of our Maker? As the psalmist says, "He causeth the grass to grow for the cattle, and herbs for the service of man: that he may bring forth food out of the earth. And wine that maketh glad the heart of man, and oil to make his face to shine, and bread which strengtheneth man's heart."

We talk of "our" crops, our property, etc., when if it were not for the fertility of the soil and the sunshine and showers, all our labors would be in vain. We are fed by God's bounty, even given wine, which "maketh glad the heart of man" if used as it was intended, not in fermented liquors that, when drunk freely, make people mad—as they surely do. We should daily bless the Lord for His goodness to the children of men.

A queen whose name we do not know had a son named Lemuel. To him this unknown queen wrote, "It is not for kings, O Lemuel, it is not for kings to drink wine; nor for princes strong drink: Lest they drink, and forget the law, and pervert the judgment of any of the afflicted."

Strong drink is bad for any man or woman, high or low, but to him who has charge of the affairs of a nation it is fatal. His judgment is distorted. Things that should be important seem trivial to him; and things that really are of little moment seem vital. Especially in these chaotic days, no one who has a position of trust should drink. The world needs calm, considered thought and deeds, not muddled ones. Drinking may make men in high places forget the law, and "pervert the judgment of any of the afflicted," as the queen mother wrote.

In the second chapter of Ecclesiastes, King Solomon tells about his search for happiness. He tried merriment, feasting, great works such as building, planting of vineyards, gardens and orchards. He even tried drinking and other follies, but "retained his wisdom," so that he soon found that all these things that he had tried were vanity. Men drink to be gay, to drown their sorrows; they spend the money that should feed their families on intoxicating beverages. And after all, they find it is not real gaiety they have discovered; their sorrows have not vanished, but are more troubling than ever, and, like King Solomon, they feel that "all is vanity" worth less than nothing.

Our Golden Text sums up all that we could say about the evil of strong drink. King Solomon, noted for his wisdom, found it to be the truth, that "Wine is a mocker . . . and whosoever erreth thereby is not wise."

THE FIGHT FOR THE WORLD

THE big issue of this world-wide war grows clearer. It is freedom or slavery. Other questions are involved, but this is the main point, the most necessary thing for civilized and self-respecting people everywhere to recognize.

Forces are loose in the world, directed by strong, pitiless and unscrupulous men, to seize the world's resources and use them to dominate the earth and its people. The most startling thing about it is that the marauders now come, for their prey, to the most civilized countries instead of going, as they formerly did, to the backward and barbarous lands.

The invaders strike at regions of power and culture in order to seize their resources and use them against the owners. We have seen in western Europe how they appropriate the wealth accumulated through centuries by toil and thrift, and reduce the owners to bondage.

They kill those who will not submit and do their working and fighting for them. You see it in Norway, Holland, Belgium and France, in the occupied regions of Russia and Central Europe. You can see it most clearly, perhaps, in the unspeakable horrors of Poland and Greece, where free and enlightened people are enslaved or slaughtered on a vast scale.

They will apply this same procedure, if they can, to Britain, America, Oceania, Australia, the Dutch Indies, India and all Asia. Central and South America are not exempt. The warrior nations will strike us down and possess the earth—if we let them.

BEREAVED DOGS

THE will of Albert Payson Terhune, famous dog fancier with a special love for collies, will interest many people. His estate, which consisted very largely of dogs and their requirements, was left to his widow with careful instructions as to their care and disposal.

The older dogs, maintained by him for sentimental reasons, are to be put to death painlessly, if Mrs. Terhune herself can stand the ordeal. The younger ones may be sold to people who can prove that they are worthy of such trust, and who will provide good homes for them in suburban or rural areas.

This latter requirement is one that should be taken more seriously than it is. The dog population of our cities is enormous and seems to be steadily growing. It is all right in a small town, but the life led by millions of worthy dogs in the larger cities is far from enviable. The dogs endure it, as you might say, dogfully, but the confinement in a city flat of any dog larger than three-pint size is a mournful thing to contemplate.

CANADA BACKS DOWN

WASHINGTON — Here is the inside story on how the Army finally got permission to improve and develop a new short-cut air route over the prairies of Canada to Alaska.

Last Sunday night, Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois telephoned to Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson.

"If the Army doesn't act on this immediately," Senator Lucas said, "I'm going to start a Senate investigation within 24 to 48 hours. It's about time we knew whether the Canadians were with us or not. I'm a friend of the President's and a strong administration supporter, but if he doesn't act, the Senate is going to."

The Senator from Illinois was referring to the fact that two days before, a Northwest Airlines plane had left to pioneer the new air route over Canadian prairies, had been stopped by Canadian officials, impounded for 48 hours and then forced to return to the United States.

Lucas's threat was sufficient. Early next morning, White House Secretary Marvin McIntyre phoned him to "hold his horses," that everything would be OK.

A few hours later, the Northwest Airlines plane flew back to Canada to begin setting up ground crews, radio equipment, and technicians, not for a commercial route but on behalf of the Army.

CANADIAN YANKEE

The man who has caused countless delays to the Army in getting a commercial airline to pioneer this route is C. D. Howe, Canadian Minister of Munitions and Supply, and Acting Minister of Transport.

C. D. Howe is a native American, born in Waltham, Mass., and educated at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Later he migrated to Canada and applied his New England shrewdness to building grain elevators and pulp mills. Today he and Premier MacKenzie King are the two strong men of Canada.

Howe has no objection to the U. S. Army flying over Canada, but like a good many U. S.-British businessmen he is looking beyond the war. And he seems adamant against a U. S. commercial airline getting a foothold over any part of Canadian territory—especially a route which after the war will be the short-cut over Alaska to Asia. And he haggled for several weeks, while precious time passed, vital to the strengthening of Alaska.

On the other hand, the Army finds that a commercial airline, accustomed to flying under winter conditions, can develop air routes quickly and efficiently, permitting the Army to concentrate on other things. That is why Northwest Airlines finally will do the job for the Army.

Note: On the American side of the negotiations, the Air Corps got only the most dignified and circumspect help from General Stanley Embick, a coast artilleryman, who feels toward the Army's ground forces

Advances in Medicine Told in Layman's Book

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

A BOOK by George W. Gray, The Advancing Front of Medicine, consists of a series of discussions of recent research work and recent discoveries in medicine.

The chapter headings include: "The Aptitudes of the Body," "The Sea We Live In," "Bleeders and Clotters," "High Blood Pressure," "Sulfanilamide," "Influenza," "Allergy," "Anxiety," "Brain Storms," "Sleep," "Smoke," "Drink," "Cancer," and "Aging." Mr. Gray is not a doctor but has been described as "probably one of the ablest popularizers of science writing in English," a judgment in which I concur.

"The Five Ailments" suggests to Mr. Gray the poem by Walter De La Mare:

It's a very odd thing—
As odd as can be—
That whatever Miss T eats
Turns into Miss T.

This poetical observation contains all the mystery that physiological

chemistry has been trying to unravel

for two hundred years.

High Blood Pressure

The chapter on "High Blood Pressure" gives a very restrained and not sensational review of the best modern work on high blood pressure, including Goldblatt's experiments on the constriction of the renal arteries, a subject which is shaking all the medical clinics at the present moment. It also discusses the possibility of surgery in the treatment of high blood pressure.

If you have been drugged with sulfanilamide or any of the sulfonamide drugs of late, you may find it comforting to have a clear exposition of the nature of the drugs in Chapter VII of Mr. Gray's book.

I think it is too bad that Mr. Gene Tunney did not read Mr. Gray's chapter on "Smoke" before he blew off his cylinder head in print lately. He lists all the possible dangers of smoking; he admits there is no evidence that it is beneficial in any way, but he does not believe that its injurious effects are very widespread. Only those who elect to smoke, smoke.

A Fair View

It was once said of the biologist, Loeffler, that each summer as he started on his vacation, he packed one hundred cigars. His practice was to return home as soon as the one hundred cigars were used up. He had found by experience that when he was having a good time he didn't smoke much, so he made his supply stretch out further and thus permitted himself to enjoy a longer holiday.

Under the chapter on "Drink," again Mr. Gray points out all the possible dangers of the habit. Responsible citizens have three attitudes about the matter. Among one group, liquor is regarded as an emissary of the devil. In the second, it is regarded as an arouser of cheer, the invoker of hospitality, the companion of good fellowship, the servant of man. The third group takes a middle ground, knows what its dangers are, what its advantages are and feels that it is one man's meat and another man's poison.

I think Mr. Gray is fair to all disputants in the various controversies that rage around the subject.

SYNOPSIS
ANETTE WINSLOW, 17, beautiful, and aspiring to fame on the stage, meets
LAURENCE PEYTON, top-ranking actor, and AUGUST DRAKE, Peyton's leading lady. Larry in turn introduces her to LOIS LYNDON, and her brother, JIMMY.

CHAPTER TWELVE
THERE WERE no further words. They were inside now, a part of the warmth and music and clamor and delicious odors from the chafing dishes. Anette moved to a small mirror, in a secluded alcove, to smooth her hair. Verrazano went to August Drake's side. Larry, still looking childishly sulky, joined Walter.

The two latter picked up glasses of wine and moved apart from the crowd, closer and closer to the alcove, until they were directly back of his Georgian colonades. The young doctor's words became clear. "How did you happen to marry her anyway?" Anette felt her heart bumping in her throat. Although she herself wondered why Larry had married her, she didn't want others to be puzzled. Especially not Walter. And she had to know what explanation Larry was going to give. Even if it hurt.

"Don't you remember," he asked his friend, "when we were kids on the wrong side of the tracks?" "That's a crazy question. Of course I do. I'm still there. But what has that to do?" "We were picking up coal," Larry persisted, "when a train with a private car stopped right by us and a girl looked out the window. You surely remember her."

A note of comprehension crept into Walter's voice. "Yes, I do now. She was grown up and we were dirty-nosed brats, but even at that age we elected her the most beautiful girl in the world."

Larry reminded, "Yes, and you said when you grew up you were going to marry a girl who looked just like her."

"You said the same thing." "Yes, and I did it. She hasn't any money and certainly no private car. But wait, she is it! I knew that when I saw her in my dressing room mirror. You just didn't have your eyes open, pal. Probably thinking about some kid's mastoid. Yes, I married her to take her away from you and everyone else who was bound to come along."

"She wouldn't have had me," Walter said glumly. "You didn't try—thank God!"

The doctor took another slant. "I'll probably never marry."

"The hand goes over the heart with that speech," Larry guffawed. "The fellows who say that always wind up proud papas, weighing Junior on the vegetable market scales."

They moved back toward the big table and Anette was able to escape from the concealing alcove. August, still the center of attention, her face animated above the black dinner dress, was lading her concoctions onto silver-banded plates which Katie and the two hotel waiters served immediately. Verrazano and one of the musicians were lifting bottles of champagne from ice buckets and pouring it into tall-stemmed glasses.

The young bride had no time in which to ponder the conversation of her husband and Walter. It meant little, anyway, for again Larry was by her side and she was in the curve of his arm while these dozens and dozens of guests drank a toast to them. The musicians left off their eating and drinking to play the opening bars of the "Wedding March." It was unbelievably exciting. Even the four Sealyhams escaped from August's bedroom to bark and run about frenziedly. Larry made a speech. Then Anette made a speech. That is, she began a speech, which after a dozen words deserted her. As a substitute for words, she threw up her left hand, so that the diamonds bit back at the lights, like a million spangles beneath a gigantic spot, a gesture so childish and thrilled that everyone burst out laughing. Everyone except August and Lois Lyndon.

The actress looked stupefied. The blond debutante lost her glacial appearance and glowered heatedly. Anette did not care. Let August cook. Let Lois have her money. She had Larry and actually the evening celebration was her show. Her beautiful and exciting, completely golden and sparkling show.

When Anette awoke the following day, a little after 1 o'clock, Larry was sitting up in bed, reading the paper, looking through it rather. From beneath her straight black lashes, she watched him plow impatiently through sheaf after sheaf, then stop abruptly to read, his face mellowed by a slight grin. A moment later he ripped out the gratifying columns, discarded the other pages and reached for another newspaper, whereupon he went through the same flustered, rattling procedure.

It dawned upon the still sleepy Anette that he was reading the wedding publicity. "You must think you look pretty good," she commented drowsily.

"I do, my beloved, I do. So does August. But you are decidedly the 'Little Mouse' type." He bent to give her an affectionate kiss.

"And who is to blame? No one but you." She raised herself and leaned against his shoulder to see the photographs. "Oh," she groaned, "but I am a country cousin." A bit angry, she reproached him. "You didn't have to make me a plain Jane."

"Is that so? Take a long, unbiased look at yourself sometime, Mrs. Peyton. You look like a baby. You'll have to do something about it, my pet. I was kidded unmercifully last night about my child wife—after all, that isn't India."

When she did not answer Larry stopped reading to look at her. She was lying flat on her back, her left hand held aloft, eyes intent on the wriggles of her fourth finger. He kissed her again. "Seriously, my darling Dora Copperfield, can't you manage to look a little older? I have an occasional gray hair, you know. Premature, naturally." He rushed to say, "but none the less gray."

She sat up and stiffened. "Now, Larry, if you think I'm going around looking like a backwoods dud simply to appear older—"

"It's your clothes, mainly, Anette. That school kid beret and all those sweaters and blouses and skirts."

The girl's voice clouded. "Those are the only kind of clothes I have. They are left from school. I have to wear them."

"Oh, no you don't! That's what I'm trying to tell you. Go buy some new ones. For Pete's sake don't lug over and more junk from the Four Arts club. Good riddance! Go buy a sophisticated suit of some sort and a couple of silk pants. Buy a hat with a veil and some ear ornaments and some good gloves. And, before I pass out, get a new fur coat. Toss that leopard affair into the ashcan. I've been ashamed of you every time you've worn it." Her eyes smarted, then overflowed. "Please don't make fun of me."

"I'm not making fun of you. And stop crying. Gosh, you're probably the only girl in existence who bursts into tears at being told to go buy new clothes."

"You know I'm not crying because of that—it just somehow breaks my heart to know you have been ashamed of me." She slumped against the satin-padded headboard of the bed and burst into sobs.

Larry put his free arm about her. "Cut it out now! Cut it out! That's the world, Anette. But for you, it will be different from now on. I'm going to buy you beautiful dresses and the new fur coat—"

He put his whiskered chin against her soft hair. "In fact, I'm going to buy you a new fur coat every year."

"If Grandma were alive, she'd faint," Anette chuckled faintly. "When she bought me the leopard coat she thought it should last me a lifetime."

Larry's retort was dry voiced. "It looks as if it had. In fact, I wouldn't have been surprised if you'd told me it was Grandma's coat." He felt her shoulders switch convulsively and forestalled, "Now, darling, I'm sorry. I'm only teasing. But get busy on the new clothes. August will help you shop."

"No!" She straightened and pulled away from him, then as quickly sank back. "Oh, Larry, why can't we go on a honeymoon?"

He was aghast. "A honeymoon? Look, my love, this is our dovecot for the time being. I'm in a play and if you think I'd let that stand in the way of my place—"

His chest had swelled inches. "Why, the audience would walk out. Besides, I have to make money to pay for little toys such as diamond rings and fur coats."

The girl said meekly, "I don't have to have them." "Spoken like a brave soldier—at the point of a bayonet! Of course you have to have them. As Laurence Peyton's wife, you have to look the part. Besides, I want you to have things. I want you to be humpbacked from carrying diamonds around. I want you to be able to eat one day when you're fat and retired and still have plenty left."

"Take a look at this!" He thrust the paper toward her. Quite a spread about you. August said she had told a whopper, but I didn't know what. Apparently, it went over well enough. She said it would give the marriage more prominence and she was right."

A few words caught Anette's eye. "August Drake's choice as most promising young actress was August Drake's leading man." In cold sarcasm the girl inquired, "Who got married? August Drake?"

"Aha! You must be waking up. The meek weeps are leaving you. You'll be your usual shrewd self any moment now." He frowned slightly. "I think it was very clever of August to think of that angle, considering that you've done nothing but amateur shows."

"Yes, as you say, it gives the marriage importance." "That's right. Telephone for some breakfast, will you, dear?" He still was pouring over the newspaper accounts. "Boy, what a joke!"

His wife did not answer. But her head, leaning against the transmitter, while she waited for Room Service to answer, was busy with plans to develop into such a talented and professional actress that she no longer would be a joke.

Mr. Gray is not a doctor but has been described as "probably one of the ablest popularizers of science writing in English," a judgment in which I concur.

"The Five Ailments" suggests to Mr. Gray the poem by Walter De La Mare:

It's a very odd thing—
As odd as can be—
That whatever Miss T eats
Turns into Miss T.

This poetical observation contains all the mystery that physiological chemistry has been trying to unravel for two hundred years.

High Blood Pressure

The chapter on "High Blood Pressure" gives a very restrained and not sensational review of the best modern work on high blood pressure, including Goldblatt's experiments on the constriction of the renal arteries, a subject which is shaking all the medical clinics at the present moment. It also discusses the possibility of surgery in the treatment of high blood pressure.

If you have been drugged with sulfanilamide or any of the sulfonamide drugs of late, you may find it comforting to have a clear exposition of the nature of the drugs in Chapter VII of Mr. Gray's book.

I think it is too bad that Mr. Gene Tunney did not read Mr. Gray's chapter on "Smoke" before he blew off his cylinder head in print lately. He lists all the possible dangers of smoking; he admits there is no evidence that it is beneficial in any way, but he does not believe that its injurious effects are very widespread. Only those who elect to smoke, smoke.

A Fair View

It was once said of the biologist, Loeffler, that each summer as he started on his vacation, he packed one hundred cigars. His practice was to return home as soon as the one hundred cigars were used up. He had found by experience that when he was having a good time

Looking Back in Pickaway County

FIVE YEARS AGO

Mrs. Frank Marion, North Scioto street, and Miss Mary McKenzie of the Kingston Garden club were speakers at the meeting of the Pickaway Garden club at the home of Mrs. Orion King, West High street.

Miss Mary Dunlap, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Renick Dunlap, Kingston, an honor student at Ohio State university, was elected president of the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority.

Circleville and practically every township of the county contributed more to the 1936 seal sale than in 1935, the annual report showing the total of $1,098.41.

BREAKFAST

1 glass pineapple juice (50 calories); 1 slice whole wheat toast (75 calories); 1 cup coffee—no cream or sugar.

LUNCH

1 cold lean meat sandwich on toasted rye bread (150 calories); watercress and diced beet (iron, all vitamins) salad—no oil in dressing other than mineral oil (50 calories—roughage); 1 glass milk (160 calories).

DINNER

1 cup clear beef broth (no calories); average helping meat loaf with tomato sauce (150 calories); 2 tablespoonsful of spinach (iron, phosphorus, vitamins A, B, C, and G); 1 canned pear—served hot (100 calories—roughage); 1 cup coffee—no cream or sugar.

He didn't smoke much, so he made his supply stretch out further and thus permitted himself to enjoy a longer holiday.

Under the chapter on "Drink," again Mr. Gray points out all the possible dangers of the habit. Responsible citizens have three attitudes about the matter. Among one group, liquor is regarded as an emissary of the devil. In the second, it is regarded as an arouser of cheer, the invoker of hospitality, the companion of good fellowship, the servant of man. The third group takes a middle ground, knows what its dangers are, what its advantages are and feels that it is one man's meat and another man's poison.

I think Mr. Gray is fair to all disputants in the various controversies that rage around the subject.

SYNOPSIS

ANETTE WINSLOW, 17, beautiful, and aspiring to fame on the stage, meets LAURENCE PEYTON, top-ranking actor, and AUGUST DRAKE, Peyton's leading lady. Larry in turn introduces her to LOIS LYNDON, and her brother, JIMMY.

YESTERDAY: Professor Verrazano warns Larry that he won't allow the actor to interfere with Anette's career.

CHAPTER TWELVE

THERE WERE no further words. They were inside now, a part of the warmth and music and clamor and delicious odors from the chafing dishes. Anette moved to a small mirror, in a secluded alcove, to smooth her hair. Verrazano went to August Drake's side. Larry, still looking childishly sulky, joined Walter.

The two latter picked up glasses of wine and moved apart from the crowd, closer and closer to the alcove, until they were directly back of its Georgian colonades.

The young doctor's words became clear. "How did you happen to marry her anyway?"

Anette felt her heart bumping in her throat. Although she herself wondered why Larry had married her, she didn't want others to be puzzled. Especially not Walt. And she had to know what explanation Larry was going to give. Even if it hurt.

"Don't you remember," he asked his friend, "when we were kids on the wrong side of the tracks?"

"That's a crazy question. Of course I do. I'm still there. But what has that to do?"

"We were picking up coal," Larry persisted, "when a train with a private car stopped right by us and a girl looked out the window. You surely remember her?"

A note of comprehension crept into Walter's voice. "Yes, I do now. She was grown up and we were dirty-nosed brats, but even at that age we elected her the most beautiful girl in the world."

Larry reminded, "Yes, and you said you grew up with her. You were going to marry a girl who looked just like her."

"You said the same thing," he said. "Yes, and I did it. She hasn't any money and certainly no private car. But Walt, she is it! I knew that when I saw her in my dressing room mirror. You just didn't want your eyes open, pal. Probably thinking about some kid's mastoid. Yes, I married her to take her away from you and everyone else who was bound to come along."

"She wouldn't have had me," Walter said glumly.

"You didn't try—thank God!"

The doctor took another slant. "I'll probably never marry."

"The hand goes over the heart with that speech," Larry guffawed.

"The fellows who say that always wind up proud papas, weighing Junior on the vegetable market scales."

They moved back toward the big table and Anette was able to escape from the concealing alcove. August, still the center of attention, her face animated above the black dinner dress, was leading her concoctions onto silver-banded plates which Katie and the two hotel waiters served immediately. Verrazano and one of the musicians were lifting bottles of champagne from ice buckets and pouring it into tall-stemmed glasses.

The young bride had no time in which to ponder the conversation of her husband and Walter. It meant little, anyway, for again Larry was by her side and she was in the curve of his arm while these dozens and dozens of guests drank a toast to them. The musicians left off with their eating and drinking to play the opening bars of the "Wedding March." It was unbelievably exciting. Even the four Sealyhams escaped from August's bedroom to bark and run about frenziedly. Larry made a speech. Then Anette made a speech. That is, she began a speech, which after a dozen words deserted her. As a substitute for words, she threw up her left hand, so that the diamonds bit back at the lights, like a million spangles beneath a gigantic spot, a gesture so childish and thrilled that everyone burst out laughing. Everyone except August and Lois Lyndon.

The actress looked stupefied. The blond debutante lost her glacial air and peered and gazed and gazed. Anette did not care. Let August cook. Let Lois have her money. She had Larry and actually the evening celebration was her show. Her beautiful and exciting, completely golden and sparkling show.

When Anette awoke the following day, a little after 1 o'clock, Larry was sitting up in bed, reading the paper, looking through it rather. Beneath her straight black lashes, she watched him plow impatiently through sheaf after sheaf, then stop abruptly to read, his face mellowed by a slight grin.

A moment later he ripped out the gratifying columns, discarded the other pages and reached for another newspaper, whereupon he went through the same flustered, rattling procedure.

It dawned upon the still sleepy Anette that he was reading the wedding publicity. "You must think you look pretty good," she commented drowsily.

"I do, my beloved, I do. So does August. But you are decidedly the 'Little Mouse' type." He bent to give her an affectionate kiss.

"And who is to blame? No one but you." She raised herself and leaned against his shoulder to see the photographs. "Oh," she groaned, "but I am a country cousin."

A bit angry, she reproached him. "You didn't have to make me a plain Jane."

"Is that so? Take a long, unbiased look at yourself sometime. Mrs. Peyton. You look like a baby. You'll have to do something about it, my pet. I was kidded unmercifully last night about my child wife—after all, this isn't India."

When she did not answer Larry stopped reading to look at her. She was lying flat on her back, her left hand held aloft, eyes intent on the wriggles of her fourth finger. He kissed her again. "Seriously, my darling Dora Copperhead, can't you manage to look a little older? I have an occasional gray hair, you know. Premature, naturally. He rushed to say, "but none the less gray."

She sat up and stiffened. "Now, Larry, if you think I'm going around looking like a backwoods dud simply to appear older—"

"It's your clothes, mainly. Anette. That school kid beret and all those sweaters and blouses and skirts."

The girl's voice clouded. "Those are the only kind of clothes I have. They are left from school. I have to wear them."

"Oh, no you don't! That's what I'm trying to tell you. Go buy some new ones. For Pete's sake don't lug over and more junk from the Four Arts club. Good riddance! Go buy a sophisticated suit of some sort and a couple of silk prints. Buy a hat with a veil and some ear ornaments and some good gloves. And, before I pass out, get a new fur coat. Toss that leopard affair into the ashcan. I've been ashamed of you every time you've worn it."

Her eyes smarted, then overflowed. "Please don't make fun of me."

"I'm not making fun of you. And stop crying. Gosh, you're probably the only girl in existence who bursts into tears at being told to go buy new clothes."

"You know I'm not crying because of that—it just somehow breaks my heart to know you have been ashamed of me." She slumped against the satin-padded headboard of the bed and burst into sobs.

Larry put his free arm about her. "Cut it out now! Cut it out! That's the world, Anette. But for you, it will be different from now on. I'm going to buy you beautiful dresses and the new fur coat—"

He put his whiskered chin against her soft hair. "In fact, I'm going to buy you a new fur coat every year."

"If Grandma were alive, she'd faint," Anette chuckled faintly. "When she bought me the leopard coat she thought it should last me a lifetime."

Larry's retort was dry voiced. "It looks as if it had. In fact, I wouldn't have been surprised if you told me it was Grandma's coat." He felt her shoulders switch convulsively and forestalled. "Now, darling, I'm sorry. I'm only teasing. But get busy on the new clothes. August will help you shop."

"No!" She straightened and pulled away from him, then as quickly sank back. "Oh, Larry, why can't we go on a honeymoon?"

He was aghast. "A honeymoon? Look, my love, this is our dovecote for the time being. I'm in a play and if you think I'd let that stand in dope take my place—"

His chest had suddenly and forestalled. "Now, darling, I'm sorry. I'm only teasing. But get busy on the new clothes. August will help you shop."

More Than 100 Join In District Garden Clinic

Victor Ries Of OSU Speaks At Williamsport

One hundred and four registered Friday for the garden clinic of ninth district of the Ohio association of garden clubs held in the Methodist church of Williamsport. Professor Victor Ries of Ohio State university and secretary of the Ohio Association of Garden clubs was guest speaker. He discussed "Victory Gardens" at the morning session. He advised his audience in the beginning of his talk to use good common sense and not to plan gardens in the name of patriotism. He also asked that ground and seeds be not wasted.

Professor Ries advised early planting for those having vegetable gardens and talked on planning for a succession of vegetables during the summer. In this connection he stressed the use of fertilizer and compost piles and mentioned a fine bulletin on gardens now available at all county farm bureau offices.

Growers were urged to add new flowers and vegetables to their gardens, Professor Ries saying that there are many lovely old varieties not commonly grown.

During the afternoon garden clinic, he answered many questions on garden problems of members.

George Emmett of Columbus gave a splendid talk on the conservation of natural resources. He advised the audience not to be discouraged during these unsettled times but to turn attention to things near at hand and become acquainted with the fine places in the home vicinity.

Mrs. George Warner, president of the Columbus Garden Center, discussed "Birds" during the afternoon, especially in connection with her summer home in the Hocking hills where she has established a sanctuary for birds and small wild animals.

Mrs. Marshall Fenton, regional director, announced that Arbor Day would be April 10 this year and asked that the members plant trees. She also told of the change in date of the state convention of the Ohio Association of Garden clubs from September to June 10 and 11, when it will be at the Desher-Wallick hotel, Columbus.

Mrs. Joseph Varney, president of the Deercreek Garden club, welcomed the group at the morning session. Mrs. Clark K. Hunsicker of West Union street responded.

Dinner was served by members of the Williamsport club.

Organ music during the afternoon was furnished by Mrs. Paul Rose.

Garden clubs in Pickaway, Fayette, Highland, Ross, Hocking and Jackson counties are included in the ninth district.

Present from the Pickaway Garden club of Circleville were Mrs. Smith Hulise, president, Mrs. Hunsicker, Mrs. E. E. Porter,

EDITORIAL DO 'EM RIGHT

Why do things wrong when with a little more effort they can be done right? The old saying, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again," is true but not always possible. Sometimes you do not have any opportunity to try again.

If a little more effort were put forth a person could do a thing right and succeed at the same time.

In school you think: "Do it any old way, it doesn't matter, I'll get by." You may "get by" but do not try to do it any old way when you are out on your own and receiving a salary. Do your own work and make it matter or you will not be receiving a salary very long.

As you go into a class do you go with a feeling of gladness or moodiness? Your feeling usually depends on whether or not you are prepared and whether or not it is your own work. Do your own work to the best of your ability and while it may not be right and you do not receive a good grade, you will feel right in your heart because the work is yours.

Remember Theodore Roosevelt's old saying: "Do the best you can with what you have where you are" and apply it to your own case. If a person will always do the best he can wherever he is, he is bound to succeed.

If you do 'em right to the best of your ability wherever you are and do 'em yourself you will be a true American.

MARCH 12 AND 13 MARK JUNIORS' DATE FOR DEBUT

With less than a week to go, members of the Junior class play cast are putting their "all" in rehearsing "Lease On Liberty". The production, directed by Samuel R. Johnson, is scheduled for Thursday and Friday, March 12 and 13, 8:30 p. m. in the high school auditorium.

Because of today's conflicts the class chose a patriotic comedy. The plot revolves around "Grammy", a rich, militant and indomitable grandmother who is proud of her seventy-eight years of life and bristles with the "Spirit of '76". She sees her son-in-law Matthew Powell and grandchildren, Matt, Ted and Jinx, being duped by a bunch of Communists and fifth columnists using Mr. Powell's newspaper for propaganda.

With the help of her 21-year-old companion, Fay Latimer (and a young Russian, Mischa, who has found Utopia in the United States, Grammy finally straightens things out.

Of course, everything ends happily, that is except for Paul Butler, the villain, who gets a jawful of Pickering's fist. Besides Mischa, Ted and Jinx, Magnolia, the colored maid, lends another humorous side. The flustered bearded Mother also intensifies the plot.

This year's Junior class play has another new twist, inasmuch as it contains a prologue and epilogue besides the usual three acts. This presentation is right up-to-date ending with the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Your every emotion will be aroused—gayety, when Ted is trying to look like a man; sadness, when Grammy disinherits her son-in-law; doubt as to whether or not Dad, Mr. Powell, will change his policies; fright, when Paul Butler is foiled in his his undertaking; laughter, at Magnolia; terror, when Butler shoots Mischa, the Russian; and your heart will skip a beat at the patriotic tenness. This sparkling comedy drama, with its heart-stirring patriotism, has been a huge success wherever presented.

The Junior class extends its welcome to anyone and everyone who is able to patronize this extravaganza.

"Lease On Liberty" was written by Dana Thomas and is produced by special arrangement with the Northwestern Press.

Tickets will go on reserve Tuesday, March 10, at a downtown drug store.

Cast members are announced in another article.

SCHOOL CLOSURES AT HIGH STREET

Because the High Street school heating plant has gone out of commission and it is so old that it can not be repaired an emergency has been created for the pupils attending that building.

The school board and Frank Fischer, superintendent of schools, have worked out the schedule given below. This will probably be in operation until warm weather—perhaps until May 4. In the meantime coal stoves have been installed in the two north rooms in the High Street building. This cannot be done in the other four rooms.

The schedule worked out by the school board and Mr. Fischer is as follows: Grades one and two will attend school at the High Street building each day from 1:00 p. m. until 5:15 p. m. Grades three and four will attend school at the High Street building from 8:00 a. m. until 12:45 p. m. Grades five and six will attend school during the regular morning and afternoon sessions at the Corwin-High School building. They should enter by the west Corwin street door.

Special education II has been discontinued. Mrs. Daniel Pfoutz, formerly teacher of the special education class, has taken over the grade formerly taught by Mrs. Catherine Bowers who is on leave of absence suffering from a nervous breakdown.

DO 'EM RIGHT

Why do things wrong when with a little more effort they can be done right? The old saying, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again," is true but not always possible. Sometimes you do not have any opportunity to try again.

If a little more effort were put forth a person could do a thing right and succeed at the same time.

In school you think: "Do it any old way, it doesn't matter, I'll get by." You may "get by" but do not try to do it any old way when you are out on your own and receiving a salary. Do your own work and make it matter or you will not be receiving a salary very long.

As you go into a class do you go with a feeling of gladness or moodiness? Your feeling usually depends on whether or not you are prepared and whether or not it is your own work. Do your own work to the best of your ability and while it may not be right and you do not receive a good grade, you will feel right in your heart because the work is yours.

"OFFICE OF GOOD GRAMMAR"

Archibald MacLeish, noted poet, Librarian of Congress and Chief of the Office of Facts and Figures, now has the job of censoring all speeches of Roosevelt cabinet members et al.

Since MacLeish has several famous writers on his staff, they have not been able to resist correcting a bit of bad grammar in the speeches of cabinet members.

The question of split infinitives especially seems to offend the boys in the Office of Facts and Figures.

So when they went over a proposed speech by Assistant Secretary of State Adolf Berle the other day, they returned it with a couple of split infinitives noted on the margin.

It happens, however, that Mr. Berle is quite a stylist himself. He taught for many years at Columbia, has written two or three books, and has assisted the President with many of his speeches. So Berle is now suggesting that the State Department set up a board to correct the punctuation and grammar of Mr. MacLeish's poetry.

Said petition is now pending before said Council and final action thereon, according to law will be taken on and after April 15, 1942.

40-HOUR FIGHT

The furious battle over the bill to suspend the 40-hour week in war plants caused a personal rift between two House leaders that may take a long time to heal.

When Representative John McCormack, Massachusetts liberal, was elected Democratic Floor Leader, one of his strongest supporters was a colleague who had nothing in common with McCormack except friendship — anti-New Deal, anti-Labor Representative Gene Cox of Georgia.

It was with hushed astonishment, therefore, that the House listened to Cox's bitter attack against McCormack during the stormy debate over the anti-40 hour proposal. His voice strident in anger, Cox denounced McCormack on the ground that his opposition to abolishing the 40-hour week was "not good sportsmanship, and I wonder if it is good leadership."

"I have hoped," the Georgian thundered, "that at some time the gentleman from Massachusetts would come to a realization that he is supposed to speak for the majority of this House rather than for somebody else."

Friends rushed to McCormack's defense, but he made no reply. Next day, however, under McCormack's leadership, the bill was defeated 226 to 62—a tally which left no doubts about who spoke for the "majority."

Note: Two undercover factors were responsible for this vote, which probably did not reflect the general sentiment of the country. One was a tremendous pressure drive by the AFL and CIO in the district of each Congressman. This was particularly effective with Republicans, who, with their eyes on next fall's congressional elections, are very political-minded.

Second, was the failure of the farm bloc to support the bill because it feared labor reprisals against the parity and other boodle grabs which the farm bloc is after. The bloc has been counted on to kill the 40-hour week, but the laborites served blunt notice that if the bill was passed, labor would ask the farmers. Result, the farm bloc ran for cover and the bill went into the ashcan.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

The congressional pension act created a furor, but one banker publicly on record for it. He is J. H. Nakdimen, president of the City National Bank of Fort Smith, Ark., who defended pensions for congressmen on the ground such a system would do much to eliminate "corruption". . . .The next time beefy isolationist Representative Frank Keefe of Wisconsin tries to defend his voting record on defense and foreign policy bills, it's a good bet he won't take with C. E. Broughton, scrappy editor of the Sheboygan Press.

Broughton went to the trouble of digging up a detailed record of Keefe's votes and the result didn't make good reading — for Keefe, faces a tough re-election fight this year.

CEPHAS NEWHOUSE DIES AT HOME IN WHISLER

Cephas Newhouse, 85, widely known Whisler community resident, died Friday at 5:45 p. m. of his home, complications causing death. Mr. Newhouse was born in Pickaway county April 13, 1856, a son of Isaac and Catherine Baer Newhouse.

Survivors include his widow, Sarah Jane Newhouse; a daughter, Mrs. Vanett Fetherolf of the home; four sons, Leland of Cleveland, Clayton of Buckhannon, W. Va., Russell of Kingston and Kenneth of Covington, Ky.; six grand-children and three great-grand-children.

The funeral will be Sunday at 3 p. m. at the residence, the Rev. L. V. Bauguess officiating with burial in Whisler cemetery of Donald E. Whisler. Friends may call at the residence to view the body.

Experience is not only a cruel teacher but some folks seem to be graduated out of her class.

Employment Office Will Help Recruit Farm, Factory Labor

NEED FOR HELP IN RURAL AREA GROWING ACUTE

State Service To Conduct Business Full Time In Circleville

QUESTIONNAIRES IN MAIL

Twenty-Two Others Will Be Established To Help Agriculture

A full time employment office which will recruit labor for farms and factories in Pickaway county will be established in Circleville.

The United States employment service will put its part time office in Circleville on a full-time basis within the next few weeks, according to Wade Hammond, state director of the service.

The employment office probably will be located in the engineer's office of the court house, where representatives of the service have met every Friday during the last year.

One of the primary purposes of the office will be to cope with the acute farm labor shortage which exists in Pickaway county due to the war. Many of those farm boys who have not been called into military service have found employment in defense industries, farm leaders reason, making it extremely difficult for local farmers to secure help during their harvest seasons.

Questionnaires in Mail

Nearly 3,000 farmers in the county Saturday were receiving questionnaires mailed to them by the state employment service. The questionnaires contain two statements:

1. I will (will not) need additional workers in 1942, and 2. I will (will not) be available for work on other farms. By simply checking off the statement which applies to him, the farmer may indicate the extent of his needs or the part he himself will be able to play in relieving the farm labor shortage. Employment officials have asked that the cards be filled out and returned promptly and they expressed a belief that farmers would welcome the opportunity to cooperate with the program.

The Circleville office will be one of twenty-three set up in Ohio to recruit farm and factory labor. Other counties where the offices will be established are Madison, Fulton, Henry, Paulding, Putnam, Auglaize, Mercer, Darke, Champaign, Preble, Greene, Warren, Clermont, Brown, Highland, Union, Delaware, Jackson, Morrow, Medina, Harrison and Perry.

Specialized farm representatives already have been appointed to field office staffs to aid in the drive. Director Hammond said. He estimated Ohio would be asked by the federal government to recruit at least 250,000 agricultural and industrial workers, providing employment for numerous persons laid off through transfer of factories from civilian to war production.

LANCASTER GOES AFTER U. S. ARMY CANTONMENT

LANCASTER, March 7—The War department's cancellation of plans to build an army camp at Chillicothe was followed today by a request that the department construct the camp near Lancaster instead.

R. Kenneth Kerr, Lancaster publisher, telegraphed Col. C. H. Searcy in Washington proposing that the War department use a 40,000-acre tract in Fairfield and Hocking counties for the camp.

Terming the location unsuitable, War department officials abandoned plans to build a 50,000-acre camp near Chillicothe, site of Camp Sherman during the first World war.

TWO CINCINNATI SCHOOL PUPILS TRAIN VICTIMS

The drive is continuing westward toward Prome (3), in an attempt to cut off the retreat of the British garrison in the Burma capital.

Surabaya Under Fire With Japs Holding Enormous Strength Advantage

China—which is dominated by Japan—that the Surabaya naval base on Java island already is under Jap artillery fire and is "expected to fall soon."

(This account said the Japanese, aided by 10-ton tanks and a powerful air force, were advancing along the railway toward Rangkasbitung, where furious fighting was said to be raging. It added the Dutch were resisting fiercely and launching "unsuccessful counter-attacks.")

For everyone on Java island, from the richest Indies merchant to the humblest worker, ordinary ways of life have disappeared.

Ceremony in hotels has been shelved for a happy-go-lucky serve yourself plan. Residents stand before long tables on which prepared food has been laid and eat with one ear cocked for anti-aircraft fire or the roar of airplane engines—ready to dive for cover if bombs begin to fall.

Preparations Complete

Preparations for defense of Bandung are complete. But realization of the tremendous odds in favor of the Japs has compelled everyone in Bandung to turn his thoughts to the hills, where a last ditch stand may have to be made if the city is evacuated.

Meanwhile, exhausted and battered by bombs, the defending Dutch troops were at bay in the hills east and west of Bandung, fighting doggedly in an effort to ward off the anticipated Japanese smash.

Lacking air support and cut off from hope of reinforcement, the defending United Nations troops made a grim, back-to-the-wall stand as observers in Bandung conceded the chances of saving Java are slim.

Batavia, the Netherlands East Indies capital, was in Japanese hands and the great naval base of Surabaya was isolated. The main defense positions stretched on either side of Bandung, provisional capital and chief remaining center of resistance.

(London morning newspapers quoted a Tokyo radio report that Japanese planes had carried out a new mass raid against Bandung.)

(A German radio broadcast heard in London claimed the Japanese advancing in a southwesterly direction, had reached the south coast of Java.)

Latest advices said the Japs were drawing close to Surabaya, where the night was rent by huge explosions as the Dutch ruthlessly destroyed naval installations in a new and gigantic application of the "scorched earth."

Since Dr. William Mather Lewis became president of Lafayette in 1926, five members of the faculty, three of them deans and two others members of the department of religion, have been elevated to head institutions of higher learning.

NAMES ADDED

Mrs. Harry Heffner, chairman of the Home Nursing program under the Red Cross added the name of Mrs. H. D. Jackson, Saturday, to sub-committees in charge of the work. She will head the equipment committee. Miss Margaret Hunsicker, county health nurse, will work with the committee in an advisory capacity.

Bricker To Be Host Next Week At Central Ohio Conference

Officials of the Boy Scout movement in central Ohio which includes Franklin, Delaware, Union, Madison, Fayette, Highland, Pickaway, Fairfield and Hocking counties will be the guests of Governor John W. Bricker, at the executive mansion next Thursday evening, March 12. The purpose of the meeting is to discuss past achievements and to lay plans for future extension of the movement in this area.

Guest speaker for the evening will be Dr. Ray O. Wyland, national director of education of the Boy Scouts of America. Dr. Wyland joined the national staff of the Boy Scouts in 1922 to further the growing relationship between the churches and the Boy Scout movement. Since that time, he has integrated the work of the Boy Scout movement with all the major religious denominations in the United States and at the present time 65 percent of the scout troops in America are sponsored by religious institutions. During Dr. Wyland's stay in Columbus he will address the scoutmasters and neighborhood commissioners at a luncheon at the Southern hotel.

RUSSIANS DRIVE FOR SMOLENSK; NEW GAIN LISTED

MOSCOW, March 7—Soviet forces were reported smashing forward toward pivotal Smolensk on the Central front today while other Red army units scored advances on the battle sectors to the north and south.

(The London Daily Express reported a Moscow radio announcement that recapture of a large industrial city on the southern front was imminent. The Express said the town referred to was believed to be Dnepropetrovsk.)

Northwest of Moscow increased pressure was applied against the 16th German army trapped in the Staraya Russa district. Likewise a Soviet noose tightened around Nazi forces at Orel and further gains were reported by Marshal Semyon Timoshenko's army in the Donetz basin.

The Moscow radio broadcast a special announcement claiming that between February 5 and March 6 no less than 40,000 Germans had been killed on the Central front and that 263 inhabited localities had been liberated from the Nazis.

(A German radio broadcast heard in London complained that a second spell of winter weather had set in on the central and northern Russian fronts.)

BLAST FOLLOWS COLLISION, KILLS FOUR IN SOUTH

SELMA, N. C., March 7—Four persons were killed and "50 or more" were injured, several critically, early today when a truck loaded with high explosives crashed into an automobile. A terrific explosion followed the crash.

None of the dead was immediately identified, but Sheriff Kirby Rose, of Johnston county, said he understood two of the victims were a traveling salesman and his wife.

The injured were rushed to hospitals at Smithfield, Goldsboro and Raleigh.

Sheriff Rose said the explosion blew a hole 20 feet deep and fifty feet wide in the street.

The Palton hotel, a service station and a tavern were destroyed by the explosion, and fire that followed, shortly after 3 o'clock this morning.

FIRE IN AUTO REPORTED STOLEN BEING STUDIED

Police and firemen Saturday were investigating an auto fire which happened on West Main street just outside the city limits Saturday at 1:55 a. m.

The car belonged to Richard Baugh, 121 West Ohio street, who reported to police at 7 a. m. Saturday that his car had been stolen from his garage. The automobile, a 1940 Pontiac coupe, apparently had been abandoned on West Main street.

Cause of the fire was undetermined, although police hinted that someone might have set it afire. The upholstery and interior fixtures were burned.

"For hours we roamed great distances over the ocean ahead. Our ships have sighted no enemy only American ships carrying more planes to the southwest Pacific.

"Our pilot decided to put in some practice flying. He suddenly climbed to a high altitude and dove at top speed.

"You can see how easy dive bombing is, and what a large target a battleship or any big ship is," the pilot said.

"You certainly get that impression as you sit in a dive bomber. Shiploads of planes, fighting men and powerful escort vessels seem completely at the mercy of this single plane.

"As the convoys move westward along the closely-guarded lifeline to Australia, the Japanese are shooting out great tentacles of naval and air power.

Submarines Used

"In some areas the tentacles consist of long range submarines. In other areas they are made up of aircraft carriers, loaded with powerful bombing and torpedo planes, protected by destroyers and cruisers. In still others there are big Japanese patrol bombers, or groups of swift-moving surface warships.

"To meet these tentacles and chop them off, the United States fleet has split itself up into what may be considered a number of fleets, each self-protecting and each able to strike swiftly by sea or air.

"Thus as the forces of America and Japan begin to make contact, naval and air battles on a scale without parallel in history are developing. These battles are taking place at widely separated points over seventy million square miles of ocean."

The Moscow radio broadcast a special announcement claiming that between February 5 and March 6 no less than 40,000 Germans had been killed on the Central front and that 263 inhabited localities had been liberated from the Nazis.

(A German radio broadcast heard in London complained that a second spell of winter weather had set in on the central and northern Russian fronts.)

BLAST FOLLOWS COLLISION, KILLS FOUR IN SOUTH

SELMA, N. C., March 7.—Four persons were killed and "50 or more" were injured, several critically, early today when a truck loaded with high explosives crashed into an automobile. A terrific explosion followed the crash.

None of the dead was immediately identified, but Sheriff Kirby Rose, of Johnston county, said he understood two of the victims were a traveling salesman and his wife.

The injured were rushed to hospitals at Smithfield, Goldsboro and Raleigh.

Sheriff Rose said the explosion blew a hole 20 feet deep and fifty feet wide in the street.

The Palton hotel, a service station and a tavern were destroyed by the explosion, and fire that followed, shortly after 3 o'clock this morning.
